

Difference between exciting and interesting PDF

The words exciting and interesting are both adjectives, and the difference between them is that the word interesting is used when express curiosity or something that catch your attention, while the word exciting is used to express enthusiasm, or to talk about something that makes you feel hype.

Are there words that can express the same meaning for exciting and interesting?

Yes, in fact the English dictionary is full of synonyms for both words interesting and exciting. Before we list them, let's look at how the word interesting and exciting can be used in sentences.

INTERESTING

Examples:

- You are a very interesting person.
- That interesting. What did you tell her?
- It is interesting to me see rocket landing on mars.
- Both Chomsky and Foucault hold an interesting debate on television.
- "That must be interesting", said the officer.

Similar:

absorbing
engrossing
fascinating
riveting
gripping
compelling
compulsive
spellbinding
captivating
engaging
enthralling
entrancing
beguiling
appealing
attractive
amusing
entertaining
stimulating
thought-provoking
diverting
exciting
intriguing
action-packed
unputdownable

Opposite:

boring

EXCITING

Examples:

- A new and exciting journey is waiting for us.
- Your idea is very exciting.
- I can't wait to do it again, it was an exciting experience.
- It would be so exciting when they get married.

Similar:

thrilling
exhilarating
stirring
rousing
stimulating
intoxicating
electrifying
invigorating
moving
inspiring
gripping
compelling
sensational
powerful
dramatic
shocking
startling
hair-raising
explosive
knife-edge
mind-blowing
edge-of-the-seat
stem-winding

Opposite:

boring

